Website Name: At-home planner

Description: This is a personal site for me that I would later like to implement for other users. I have forgotten to do things and then will put things off to the point that I need to. I see this as a way to stay on top of things so I do not fall behind. If I have to think about one less thing, I could then focus on the immediate task rather than letting the thought of another take over my thoughts and not finish the current task.

Pages:

Home – Shows a preview of all the other pages except Subscriptions

To-Do – marked by day and urgency

Schedule – school, personal, work (Google calendar type set up?)

Resources – Things I have and am out of (forms a shopping list and breaks it down into categories)(also budgeting)

Subscriptions – login-in/passwords (private), places frequent places entered

Data Stored:

Tasks, a calendar, my "resources", recipes, my subscriptions (log-in/passwords)